Task 1

Read the article about happiness. The headings of the paragraphs are missing from the text. Choose the most appropriate heading from the list (A-K) for each paragraph (1-8). There is ONE extra heading which you do NOT need to use. Write your answers in the boxes after the text. There is an example at the beginning (0).

“What makes people truly happy is how they live ‘inside of themselves,’” says Dan Baker, Ph.D., author of the best-selling What Happy People Know. You already have most of these qualities – it’s just a matter of using them. Read on to discover the science-based secrets to lasting happiness.

Having a reason to get out of bed every morning is one of the most permanent sources of happiness because it gives you something positive to focus on. If you’re not sure what your purpose is, then your purpose is to find a passion. And once you’ve discovered your passion, practice it daily. “When what you do with your daily life really talks to your heart, you’ll be truly happy,” says Baker

1

Accepting all of your life experiences with the knowledge that something good will come out of them is what it is all about. To become a more “glass half-full” thinker, remember how past bad experiences may have benefited you in the long run. Approaching a possibly bad situation with an open and curious mind you can find and stay on the brighter side of life.

2

Feeling kind and devoted towards the people in your life and knowing that you’re cared for in return is one of the biggest signs of happiness. Feelings of attachment provide a comforting sense of belonging that stimulates overall life satisfaction. Share quality time with others.

3

Research has found that people who describe themselves as “autonomous” and “self-governing” are three times more likely to be satisfied with their lives. These individuals know they have the power to leave when a situation no longer suits them, so when things get bad, they can decide to change matters.

4

The mind and body are connected, so taking care of yourself both above and below the neck makes for head-to-toe happiness. The easiest way to achieve this optimal state of being: Get moving. Regular activity increases levels of the feel-good brain chemicals. Just 10 minutes of exercise is all it takes to get you into a better mood.

5

This reminds us that life may have bigger meaning beyond our knowing, so we don't think so much of the little things. Any act that involves your soul, such as meditation, walking in the woods, reading an inspiring book, or listening to a moving piece of music, can help you tune into the bigger picture.

6

Giving without expectation is one of the easiest ways to feel good about yourself, and life in general. Charity connects you to others, gives you a purpose. Having a positive impact on somebody else's life generates feelings of goodwill that help minimize whatever negativity might be occurring in your own life.

7

Happy people mentally frame life experiences so that the good is highlighted in the forefront, while the bad stays hidden in the background. To adopt a positive viewpoint, compare a seemingly bad situation to the worst-case scenario. For instance, getting up at 5 a.m. for work isn't fun, but would you rather wake up later for a job you hate -- or worse, no job at all?

8

Make an effort to experience some funny stuff each day, whether it's by reading the comics in the newspaper or tuning in to your favourite talk show. Laughter causes physiologic changes in the body that make you feel good. One hearty laugh a day is all you need to lighten up about life.

The European Commission has formally accused Google of abusing its control in search and favouring some of its own services at the cost of rivals.

The "statement of objections" issued by the commission comes after ___(0)___ and how it operates. The ___(9)___ from rivals were sent to the commission in 2009.

However, many of the companies that complained said they had been affected ___ (10) ___. A formal investigation began in 2010. The first complaints were all about comparison shopping – i.e. ___ (11) ___ across different websites.

The commission says that when people do a shopping search, the results they get back are compared to Google's services even if ___ (12) ___.

Head commissioner Margrethe Vestager worried that Google ___ (13) ___ in the smartphone and tablet market to give its own services, such as search, more importance.

The commission has tried three times ___ (14) ___. The first two ___ (15) ___ because the companies that complained said the sanctions and changes they wanted did not go far enough. The third time round, Google offered to give better positions to rivals in its results. But this was also refused late in 2014 ___ (16) ___. This refusal led the commission to reopen its investigation and formally accuse Google of breaking the rules of market competition.
