TASK 2

A British online debate forum started a discussion about whether celebrities should be role models for teenagers. Many teenagers expressed their opinion for and against this idea. Below you can read one of the posts.

Yes, they should. Celebrities need to be seen as individual people, and not as one whole group. I have read about and seen interviews about many celebrities who go out and plant trees with the community, or go to other countries to help the children with schools, and help people with housing. Those celebrities should absolutely be role models. They do so much good.

- Why do you like this person (profession, looks, personality)?
- Which celebrities do young people in your country like? Why?
- Would you like to become a celebrity later in your life? If yes, why? If no, why not?
